Please note the information above is of a general nature and advice may vary depending on the type of service being provided (e.g.: indoors versus outdoors). We ask that you please refer to the further detail listed below for more specific instruction.

Information from the Australian Government Department of Health <https://www.health.gov.au/> and relevant state and territory health regulatory bodies.

In addition to the information outlined on this reference guide, all forms of PPE are required if:

- care for someone with suspected, probable or confirmed COVID-19
- undertake clinical examination or collect specimens from people who have suspected, probable or confirmed COVID-19
- have significant contact with people who have fever or acute respiratory symptoms work directly with patients or residents in an area with significant community transmission – community transmission is defined by jurisdictional public health authorities

Contact and droplet-based precautions should be implemented when HenderCare workers are providing care to people with undiagnosed respiratory infections and or aerosol-generating tasks.

Masks must be worn if stipulated in the service recipient's care plan or advised by HenderCare. All team members have a responsibility to check local state or territory health websites for regular updates regarding health and quarantine advice.
